

How do fingernails grow?

Once upon a time, man did not have fingernails and all the companies selling nail polish were losing money fast. All the big chief guys from each corporation called a meeting to see how to fix it.

“Why are we losing money?”

“No-one buys our nail polish sir.”

“And why not?”

“They don’t have nails”

“Oh.”

And so the chief guy tried to come up with another use for nail polish, but when he tried to prove it safe to drink, he died. Oops.

He’d been a very good man on earth, so he duly arrived at the pearly gates of heaven, and peter offered him 4 choices.

“You can enter the kingdom of heaven and find out the meaning of life; you can go back to earth and have another meaningless life; you can have one single wish and go to HELL (MUHUUHAHAHAHA); or you can pull my finger, sorry, my little joke.”

“Emm, can I go anywhere to think?”

So he went to a place called limbo to think, and think he did. Eventually he decided upon a wish, so wish he did, and he also burned in hell, which wasn’t all that nice.

He had wished that somehow everyone would grow fingernails, and so, every night, while you sleep, angels dip your fingers in a fingernail growing solution, but occasionally it goes wrong, and the solution is too warm, causing the growee to wet the bed, which is a good excuse, “B-but mummy, it was angels”.

Toenails are another story though....
